BIOGRAPHY

Rafael Amar is an associate at Alemán Cordero Galindo & Lee whose practice focuses on banking and finance, capital markets, and mergers and acquisitions. He has taken part in several of the firm's most significant and complex transactions, advising international banks, multilateral institutions, and leading Panamanian economic groups on a wide range of financings, securities offerings, and cross-border acquisitions.

Recognized by The Legal 500 as a Leading Associate in Corporate and M&A, Rafael has been described as a rapidly rising lawyer, strengthening his position as one of the standout young talents in Panama's legal market. His track record reflects an innovative, results-oriented approach that has enabled him to advance quickly within the firm and earn the trust and recognition of both clients and colleagues.

Admitted to practice law in the Republic of Panama since 2019, Rafael earned his Bachelor of Law and Political Science, cum laude, from Universidad Santa María la Antigua, and subsequently obtained an LL.M. from Duke University School of Law, where he also received a Certificate in Business Law.
